A surgical eyelash solution

For seriously sparse lashes that don't respond to other treatments, talk to your doctor about eyelash restoration surgery. Similar to traditional hair restoration, individual hairs are taken from around the ear area and implanted into the upper eyelids using an oral sedative and a series of local anesthesia injections. During the two- to two-and-a-half-hour procedure, nearly 300 hairs (and follicles) are transplanted. "The donor site is less than an inch long, and once it heals, it's often very hard to find the scar," says hair transplant surgeon Gary Hitzig, MD, of New York City and Rockville Centre, NY. As for the transplant site, some bruising, swelling and scabbing may be noticed post-surgery, but your lashes will immediately look fuller. "About four to six weeks after the procedure, the transplanted hairs will fall out. But in 12 weeks there will be new hair growth," says Dr. Hitzig.

LASH STYLER

A pint-sized curler, ModelCo Lash Wand works in conjunction with your favorite mascara and employs heat (at a safe temperature to protect against overheating and burning) to curl and lengthen lashes without the tugging and pinching associated with regular eyelash curlers.

INNOVATIVE MASCARA

The key to flirty, feminine lashes is in the mascara applicator. Inside Yves Saint Laurent Everlong Mascara lies an innovative cylindrical wand comprised of rows of tiny, flat combs that form miniscule reservoirs of mascara, perfectly gripping and coating each and every lash from root to tip. Couple that with a luxurious mascara formula consisting of white lupin, horse-chestnut extracts and pro-vitamin B5, and you'll be batting your lashes all day long.

FALSE LASHES IN A TUBE

If applying false eyelashes on a daily basis just doesn't fit into your beauty routine, mascara that recreates the look of faux lashes may be an option, like the Japanese cult product Imju Fiberwig. This "un-mascara" glides on smoothly, coating each eyelash with separating and defining fibers. Ingredients like beeswax allow for easy removal of the clump-free formula (wash with warm water) without clogging or damaging delicate lash follicles.

NIGHTTIME TREATMENT

Add length and volume to thin, short or sparse lashes while you sleep with DermaQuest DermaLash. Easy-to-use, this nourishing clear gel contains clotsfoot flower and cinchona succirubra bark extracts to stimulate the lash follicle to increase growth, as well as biotin, copper and panthenol to strengthen weak lashes and conditioners like hydrolyzed wheat and soy proteins. Together, these botanical ingredients increase the thickness and volume of your lashes in as little as three weeks, according to the company.
